The Margellos World Republic of Letters is a global network of writers, scholars, and intellectuals who share a common commitment to the power of literature to change the world. Founded in 1927 by the Argentine writer Jorge Luis Borges, the Republic has since grown to include members from all over the world.

Celestina tells the story of the Republic from its founding to the present day. Through interviews with leading members, archival research, and a close analysis of the Republic's literary output, the book provides a rich and nuanced portrait of this important literary movement.

Celestina is essential reading for anyone interested in the history of literature, the role of literature in society, or the future of the written word.
