Here is a brief excerpt from the novel:

“The Peregrine emerged from the warp, and before them lay a vast and swirling nebula. The colors were so vibrant and the patterns so intricate that it looked like a living, breathing entity. Captain Isen stood on the bridge, her eyes fixed on the viewscreen. She could feel the awe and wonder of her crew all around her.

"This is why we explore," she said. "This is why we push the boundaries of human knowledge. To see the wonders of the universe firsthand."

The crew nodded in agreement. They had all signed up for this mission knowing that it would be dangerous, but they were also driven by a thirst for adventure and discovery. They were explorers, and they were ready to face whatever the universe threw their way.”
