The story follows Lydia, a woman who has spent her life keeping her true self hidden from her family. Haunted by her mother's disapproval, she has retreated into a world of silence, denying her own desires and ambitions.

But when her mother is diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, Lydia is forced to confront her past and the secrets that have kept her captive. As she pieces together her mother's fractured memories, she uncovers a hidden history of pain and sacrifice.

Through the interwoven narratives of three generations of women, Ng weaves a powerful tale of identity, loss, and the transformative power of finding one's voice.
